Family Films: Musical Movies
Saturday, December 16, 12:00–1:00 p.m.

Recommended for kids ages four and up and their adult companions

These animated short films are sure to get your toes tapping! Programs include engaging discussions with a Museum educator, and suggestions for follow-up activities in the Museum's galleries.

Log Jam KJFG No. 5. 2007. Hungary. Directed by Alexei Alexeev. Three “professional” musicians—a bear, a rabbit, and a wolf—are practicing their art in the forest, but suddenly a hunter turns up on the scene . . . 2 min.

Kuumba. 1978. USA. Directed by Bob Bloomberg & Jane Aaron. Using cutouts created by children, which were animated by adults, this is an origins tale from the island of Trinidad. Set on the evening of Carnival, which is known elsewhere as Mardi Gras, the film tells a delightful story of problem-solving and discovery. 8 min.

Musical Max. 1993. USA. Directed by Virginia Wilkos. Based on the book by Robert Kraus, this film features a young hippopotamus who happens to be very musically inclined. Max can play any instrument and loves to practice. He likes to practice so much that his blowing, plinking, and banging annoys his father (and the neighbors too!). See what happens when Max decides to give up practicing. 9 min.

The Day I Beat the Sky. 2016. France. Directed by Hugues Valin. While he is fascinated by every resonating thing, a boy must face his greatest fear: a storm. He's then going to use his gift for rhythms and sounds to beat his phobia. 3 min.

Begone Dull Care. 1949. Canada. Directed by Evelyn Lambart and Norman McLaren. This masterpiece of hand drawn animation features colors, shapes, and patterns painted directly onto clear 35mm film stock and set to the jazz music of the Oscar Peterson Trio. 8 min.
