Family Films: Objects in Motion
Saturday, November 18, 12:00–1:00 p.m.

Recommended for kids ages four and up and their adult companions

Enjoy classic live-action and animated films about motion and movement, engaging discussions with a Museum educator, and suggestions for follow-up activities in the Museum's galleries.

Ballet Robotique. 1983. USA. Directed by Bob Rogers. Documentary footage of computerized robots working on an automobile assembly line is choreographed to look like a dance. Each of the movements in this mechanical ballet is dramatized by a different musical excerpt from the work of Bizet, Delibes, and Tchaikovsky. 8 min.

A Chairy Tale. 1957. Canada. Directed by Norman McLaren and Claude Jutra. This wordless black-and-white film dramatizes an amusing encounter between a man and a chair. One of the great classics for children, this film is notable for its simple story and music by Ravi Shankar. 10 min.

A Small Escape. 2016. Sweden. Directed by David Sandell. A pair of scissors escapes from a kitchen, then connects with other everyday objects to transform into a bird and flies away. 3 min.

The Music Box. 2010. USA. Directed by Jennifer Oxley and Nicholas Oxley. In a New York City apartment, a little girl is trying to open an antique wooden box. Unfortunately the box is stuck, but the little girl has an idea. 3 min.

The Big Race. 2004. USA/Madagascar. Directed by Phil Aupperle. Tulch and Noel, best friends with a day off from school, prove that you don't need fancy toys or the latest technology to have some fun on a beautiful summer afternoon. Maybe all you need is a tin can and a little imagination. 6 min.

Tickets

Admission is free. Tickets are distributed on the day of the program only, on a first-come, first-served basis.
