MoMA PS1

Stonemilker

March 23–May 17, 2015

On the occasion of Björk at The Museum of Modern Art, MoMA PS1 presents Stonemilker, Björk's first foray into the world of virtual reality, in the VW Dome. In a continuation of Björk's pioneering use of technology, Stonemilker, directed by Andrew Thomas Huang, explores the potential for virtual reality as a performance platform outside the scope of a traditional music video. Upon entering the VW Dome, the visitor is immersed in a panoramic view of an Icelandic landscape, projected using equipment provided by K2imaging Inc., while the ambient sounds of the landscape flood the space. Ten viewing stations are fitted with Freefly VR headsets and Bowers & Wilkins headphones, through which the audience can enter Björk's virtual world. The VR experience, which lasts for seven minutes, allows each visitor to interact with one of Björk's most raw and revealing performances to date, in a manner that is both intimate and confrontational.

To accommodate MoMA PS1's weekly Sunday Sessions program, the installation will not be on view on Sundays.

Stonemilker is organized by Klaus Biesenbach, Director, MoMA PS1 with Alex Sloane, Curatorial Assistant and Rosey Selig-Addiss, Associate Producer.

The exhibition is made possible by Dayana Tamendarova.

Special thanks to Karl Mehrer of K2imaging, Apple, Bowers & Wilkins, and Freefly Systems.
