

Hyundai Card is proud to support The Museum of Modern Art's exhibition Wolfgang Tillmans: To look without fear, a retrospective of the multidisciplinary output of one of the most innovative artists working today. The exhibition and this accompanying publication demonstrate the breadth and depth of Tillmans's production—including intimate photographic portraits, cameraless abstract works, still lifes, images of night life, and more—a range of artistic interactions that bring together an unusually diverse viewership. To look without fear also highlights the critical involvements Tillmans has had in social movements since the 1990s, from his advocacy for LGBTQ+ rights to his voter-turnout campaigns for elections in the European Union to Between Bridges, his foundation promoting democracy and social action. Tillmans's intrepid engagements with widely varied genres, subjects, techniques, and exhibition strategies have crucially impacted twenty-first-century creative fields and our understanding of what art can achieve.

Hyundai Card is committed to promoting the work of contemporary artists such as Wolfgang Tillmans, whose practice and actions challenge conventions while stimulating dialogue about art and social justice around the world.

A leading Korean credit-card company with expertise in data science, Hyundai Card aims to provide customers with unparalleled access to premium products and digital and cultural services. At Hyundai Card we embrace the power of design, music, and the arts and believe in the capacity of creative endeavors to enrich everyday life.
